Content Delivery Networks(CDN): CloudFlare

This internet site uses Content Delivery Networks (CDNs) to improve the performance of content provision (§ 6 (1) S. 1 lit. f GDPR forms the legal basis for this). CDNs enable common JavaScript libraries and font types to be loaded more quickly as the files used are transferred from quick, local or underutilized servers. Among other things, the IP address of the user is transmitted to the CDN service provider. You can prevent the collection and processing of your data by CDN providers by deactivating the script code in your browser or installing a script blocker in your browser (you can find these e.g. under www.noscript.net or www.ghostery.com).

We use the following CDN providers on our website: Cloudflare (<https://www.cloudflare.com>, provider: CloudFlare Inc., 101 Townsend St, 94107 San Francisco): Cloudflare operates servers in the EU but it cannot be excluded that servers outside the EU – in particular in the USA – are also used. Cloudflare is certified under the EU/USA and Switzerland/USA Privacy Shield Frameworks designed by the US Department of Commerce to manage the collection, use and storage of personal data transmitted from the EEA or Switzerland into the United States. Further information about the Privacy Shields between the EU and the USA and between Switzerland and the USA can be found on the Privacy Shield website of the US Department of Commerce at: <https://www.privacyshield.gov/welcome>. Further information about data protection at Cloudflare can be found at: <https://www.cloudflare.com/privacypolicy/>.

Amazon Web Services (AWS S3)

We use AWS S3 to properly deliver the content on our website. AWS S3 is a service of Amazon Web Services, Inc., which acts as a content delivery network (CDN) on our website. A CDN helps to provide content of our online offer, in particular files such as graphics or scripts, more quickly with the help of regionally or internationally distributed servers. When you access this content, you establish a connection to servers of Amazon Web Services, Inc. whereby your IP address and possibly browser data such as your user agent are transmitted. This data is processed solely for the above purposes and to maintain the security and functionality of AWS S3.

The concrete storage period of the processed data cannot be influenced by us, but is determined by Amazon Web Services, Inc. Further information can be found in the privacy policy for AWS S3: <https://aws.amazon.com/de/privacy/>. When you visit our website, your personal data is processed on the servers of AWS. In the process, personal data may also be transmitted to the parent company of AWS in the USA. The data transfer to the USA is based on the EU standard contractual clauses. Details can be found here:
